

I got 99 problems and the administration is one

- Administration Values – The administration values the quantification of learning, such as canvas.
- Community of scholars – As scholars we value; Friends, free time, romantic relationships, weekends, food, sleep, animals, family, jobs, and much much more.
- Program area (writing) – Values engagement, ability to make an argument, to use supporting evidence, the ability to make a claim, and to make connections to your major.
- Professor – Professors value personal responsibility for learning and self assessment.

Admin vs
Scholar
collision

With all four audiences valuing different things this is an easy way for the audiences to butt heads. For example, the administration wants students to excel in school and spend 3 hours studying for every hour in class, but some students have sports and other activities going on and don't have that kind of time to put in. Another example is that the administration wants numbers and doesn't care about the effort made in a class, when professors care about self assessment and how much you tried in the class.

Bill also talked to us about how professors have to satisfy the needs of not only the administration (owner of the restaurant) but also the needs of the scholars (the customers). They are put in a tough situation
