

Mirror

Mirror...

What I mean about mirror is that you in your own mind are always thinking about looks and such things. But what I think about a mirror now is that of our lives. Mirrors reflect things, be it light, images, and heat, however, to me it reflects actions, memories and progress. I have done many reflections in my life but they were in the more informal sense of reflection. Now for me to do a formal reflection is hard because everyone has their own opinion of how they are. Its interesting that when a more formal reflection is done people have a hard time giving an answer, even I do it, but its easy for us to do an informal reflection as well because sometimes the reflection is very personal/important to that person.

How do you view reflection and why is it like that? Its a very bold topic I guess but you can make comments related to this topic below.